foster (verb): to give parental care to: NURTURE
The terms “Resource Parents” and “Resource Family” are now used instead of “Foster Parents” and “Foster Family.” In California, a Resource Family is a caregiver who provides out-of-home care for children in foster care. Resource Families include individuals, couples and families. They may be related, have a familiar or mentoring relationship, or no previous relationship with the child. The Resource Family is approved to provide care on a temporary (foster care) and/or permanent (adoption and legal guardianship) basis and includes all types of caregivers in the child welfare and probation systems formerly known as foster parents, approved relatives or approved Non-relative Extended Family Member.
The AFS MISSION is to support vulnerable children and families in need of stability, safety, and wellbeing in communities.

AFS VALUES

Evidence-Based and Outcome Driven
AFS is committed to measuring and collecting data to help our clients, families, and staff understand their accomplishments and help them set clear, realistic goals as they move forward.

Community and Family Centered
AFS believes children heal and thrive living with families in the community. AFS works with clients and families in their own homes, schools and other community settings. AFS brings its services to our clients rather than expecting clients to come to us.

Strength Based
AFS is committed to identifying, utilizing, and celebrating individual strengths in our approach to healing children and supporting foster and adoptive families who generously open their homes.

Cultural Humility
AFS values the variety of backgrounds and experiences of all people we work with—children, youth, biological, foster and adoptive families. AFS employs a culturally diverse staff sensitive to clients’ cultural cues and preferences. AFS celebrates the diversity of our clients and their families, integrating this appreciation in all of our work. AFS proudly offers all of our services in English and Spanish.

To the AFS Community,

One thing that almost everyone can agree upon is 2020 has been extraordinary, and not in a good way. COVID-19 has upended how everything in the world operates. The pandemic has forced businesses to close, millions of Americans to file or unemployment and students to learn remotely thus exacerbating the educational issues for many foster children who, due to adverse life experiences are already behind where they should be educationally. Controversial and often brutal deaths of people of color at the hands of police led to massive protests raising the issue to new levels of public awareness. California fires doubled the record for most acres burned and forced some AFS staff and resource families to evacuate their homes. Fortunately, no one suffered property damage or injury. Northern Californians were forced to stay indoors because hazardous air quality from the fires and millions lost power for days because of PG&E’s preventative “PSPS” measures. Meanwhile, hundreds of thousands of COVID-19 deaths and a chaotic and divisive presidential election played out in a deeply divided America.

Under all of this stress I am so proud of the resilience and response of AFS staff, families and donors! I am grateful AFS thus far has been able to avoid laying off any employee due to the pandemic. When the pandemic hit AFS staff quickly pivoted to redefine our service delivery to address new legal restrictions. AFS employees showed resourcefulness and adaptability as nearly all program activities moved to remote platforms including: resource family home visits, foster youth outpatient mental health sessions, staff meetings, and training/support services. New policies and procedures covering everything from office work to family visits were quickly and efficiently implemented. Through it all, AFS staff have constantly confronted challenges due to the pandemic including:

- How to keep children engaged during hour-long virtual mental health sessions.
- Creating compassionate and engaging remote visits between biological parents and their children in foster care as they work towards reunification.
- Recruiting and training new resource families remotely while sending staff safely into the community for home approval and emergency interventions.
- Addressing COVID exposure cases within families in a responsive, considerate and compliant manner.

From the beginning of COVID-19 restrictions, the number of youth cared for in AFS foster care, mental health and Transition Aged Youth programs have remained consistent. AFS families responded magnificently! California counties have and continue to rely on AFS to place vulnerable youth because AFS resource families stayed committed to accepting and caring for our kids during this most difficult time, even when it was difficult to provide them with the in-home caseworker support they deserve. Our San Francisco short-term emergency frontline foster parents have continuously provided in-person services. Generous individuals, businesses and community partners donated funds that allowed AFS to purchase and supply foster families and staff with PPE, technology for students’ remote learning and critical housing support for our Transitional Aged Youth.

More recently, AFS is complying with the order from the California Department of Social Services requiring Foster Family Agencies to resume in-person visits in foster homes. AFS staff have developed protocols to assure everyone’s safety including families, children, and staff.

Our clients are primarily children of color. AFS must and does stand against institutional racism, white supremacy, bigotry and hate in all its many manifestations. AFS has initiated practices on both the staff and board levels to examine and improve our capacity to be inclusive of diverse populations and guarantee them full equity and inclusion. Our mission is to support ALL vulnerable children, families and communities.

While 2020 has been a year of unprecedented events, our passionate staff, resolute board, supportive donors and amazing resource families hold firm to our commitment to create better lives for traumatized kids and families.

Cheers to the best!

I would like to express my gratitude and sadness at the retirement of Chief Program Officer, Jim Gold. Jim and I have worked together for over 30 years. Much of AFS’ creative spirit comes from Jim. His knowledge of the science and art of foster care programming is unmatched. His unique blend of pragmatism and humor will be impossible to replace. Wishing you all the best!

~ Jay and your AFS Family

I love AFS and truly excited for those who will fill my shoes. It has been a great 34 years. I wouldn’t trade them for anything.

~ Jim
While navigating the challenges of COVID-19, social injustices, historic fires, power outages, remote work and distance learning, AFS staff worked around-the-clock to establish protocols that would minimize service disruptions while maintaining the highest level of safety for foster and biological parents, foster youth and staff. The AFS Network of staff, resource & biological parents, county collaborators, donors and community partners is the reason AFS staff was able to:

Partner with resource & biological parents to establish safety protocols so foster children and teens could continue to be placed in foster homes and receive mental health services during the pandemic. In March-June alone, AFS placed 214 foster youth in safe and stable homes.

Collaborate with EmpowerMe! Services and Tangled Roots to engage in a multi-phase process of assessment and transformation that focuses on AFS becoming an agency who owns racial equity and social justice as integral to our mission.

Support Transition Aged Youth (TAY) who were furloughed or lost their job due to COVID-19.

Provide PPE, technology and other critical resources for foster youth and biological & resource parents.

Commit to maintaining administrative duties as office managers, HR and accounting staff never left their posts and have kept all offices open and workflow moving.

Pivot to virtual services for:
- recruitment and training of resource parents
- telehealth services for mental health and foster care
- staff meetings

I am a San Francisco County Child Welfare Worker in the Adoptions Unit. I'm writing to express how much I appreciated working with Ms. Alma Woodard in helping me place 7-month-old Jessica* with her Grandma Evelyn*. This case was challenging in that there were many barriers the grandmother encountered in order to get Jessica into her care. It was also emotionally loaded due to the time-sensitive pressure that Evelyn and the agency were working under in addition to the pandemic. In the short time I worked with Ms. Woodard, she promptly responded my calls, patiently explained the placement process and the challenges that needed to be tackled. Alma’s efficient and detailed documentation helped prove the level of effort being made to place Jessica. But what I valued most was the level of reassurance and support Evelyn received from Alma. Evelyn was frustrated with how long it was taking our agency to place Jessica and she became distrustful of the process. Ms. Alma served as a liaison between our agency and Evelyn. She was a hopeful sounding board and provided Evelyn with reassurance. Alma’s work promoted a healthy collaboration between all of us that ultimately led to Evelyn’s union with Jessica. Alma’s professionalism and commitment left me with an exceptional impression of AFS.*

~ Letter received by AFS senior management

Getting to Know Alma

What led you to work in this field?
I chose this work because of my childhood experience of living in poverty and being raised by a single mother. I have the compassion to help relieve people’s suffering, with the hope to improve the lives of disadvantaged children. I’m committed to social justice, with a strong desire to help families and children live productive lives in a safe, healthy environment.

Why did you choose to work at AFS?
I had been in the foster care field for twenty years when I crossed paths with some of the AFS leadership team. I learned AFS had an outstanding reputation and when the agency I was employed with closed, AFS offered me a position as a home certifier. Recently, I have accepted the position of Adoption Coordinator.

What are some positive aspects about your job?
Interacting with families during the training and approval process, group trainings, engaging with an audience, sharing professional and personal experiences and approving families who are able to provide permanency for children.

What are some challenges the come with your roll?
- Writing family evaluations, which are very time consuming due to the thorough process that requires the applicant’s cooperation.
- Learning that some families were decertified within a year of approval.

Please tell us about a particularly memorable success story!
I worked with a single mother in who desired to foster a child between 2-8 years old, preferably female, with no plans to adopt. She was approved as a resource parent in March 2019. She accepted a placement out of her age range and preferred gender, a 12-year-old male of another race. After just a month, the child really bonded with the foster mother. He calls her Mom, and told me that even though his parents had money and bought him many things, they didn’t show him love like his foster mother. The child has been in her home for a year and a half and will be adopted by the foster mother by the end of 2020. Both are excited and extremely happy.

What is one piece of advice you would provide to someone just starting out in a similar role?
I would advise one must possess compassion, empathy, and patience. You have to be sensitive to the client’s needs. One must have effective communication skills because you have to ask a lot questions and make clinical assessments in order to meet the needs of children and families. Analytical skills are important as well as having professionalism and good judgment because you will have to observe, research, and problem solve to write a comprehensive family evaluation.
83% of revenue goes to programs that strengthen & support vulnerable youth and families.
family: Simply put, “permanency” means family. It means having positive, healthy, nurturing relationships with adults who provide emotional, financial, moral, educational, and other kinds of support as youth mature into adults.³
IMPACT

“Helping families heal and reunite is one of the most rewarding parts of my job.”
~ Craig Barton, AFS Director of Foster Care

AFS provides foster care, adoption and mental health services for youth and families including:

- Youth ages 0 through 20
- Families, single parents and teen parents
- Youth and adults who have transitioned out of foster care with physical and developmental disabilities
- LGBTQ+
- Homeless youth and families
- Individuals and families that are at or below the federal poverty level

All families experience challenges and stressors. For thousands of Northern California families, the adverse effects of physical illness, addiction, unemployment, mental health crises, abuse and neglect require intervention. When families reach a critical point, their children may need to be removed from their home and placed in foster care. AFS provides a broad spectrum of care and healing services that provide:

- Families with behavioral health tools and life skills for reuniting with their children
- Adoption from foster care (fost-adopt)
- Transitioned Aged Youth (TAY) with the skills and resources to live independently in their communities

PARENTING for PERMANENCY COLLEGE

- Holiday event brunch: 175 care providers, 250 foster youth
- Care Provider Appreciation Dinner: 125 care providers, 75 foster youth
I first came to AFS when we were considering adopting a child from foster care. As part of the foster-adopt process, we had to first be approved as resource parents. It was during this process we realized there are so many kids that are in need of a loving home, that fostering kids is a way we can help while waiting to adopt.

Two brothers were our first placement. Giovanni* was seven and his baby brother Kaleb* was just 6 months old. They were at risk of being separated and our AFS caseworker asked us if we’d be willing to take in both kids. Although it was a bigger commitment we were prepared for, the thought of breaking up the boys after they were already removed from their home was heartbreaking. Jazmine was separated from her sister because her parents divorced. She wanted to help prevent that pain for the boys so we agreed to take them both in. Although fostering a baby and young boy was challenging, it was fulfilling knowing we were supporting them while their family worked towards getting back together.

The boys and their parents received services through AFS that eventually led to their reunification. It was sad to say goodbye but also uplifting knowing their family had a second chance. Jazmine and I have learned that part of the fostering process is saying goodbye and praying the families will remain strong enough to overcome their challenges.

Now, several years later, Jazmine and I have fostered ten kids and have loved each experience. Eventually, if we do decide to adopt, we’ll very likely continue to foster. It has become such a big part of our lives knowing that we’ve made a positive impact on so many kids and their families.

Certification Recruitment Intake Training Adoption (CRITA)

The CRITA team at AFS works tirelessly to:

- Recruit, train & approve individuals or couples becoming resource or adoptive parents.
- Facilitate orientations, pre/post-service trainings home walk-throughs for new applicants.
- Interview applicants to review the fundamentals of the resource family process.
- Verify applicants and adults living in the home are cleared of a criminal background.
- Write a comprehensive family evaluation assessment of all applicants.
- Confirm resource homes are in compliance with safety guidelines.

Nationally there were
221,706 approved foster homes available in 2019

In California there were

Since 1978, AFS staff have been caring for Northern California’s most vulnerable children, teens, young adults and families. Today, foster youth face incredible odds in order to become independent, healthy members of their communities. The AFS Community of resource parents, staff, community partners, donors and volunteers work side-by-side in supporting the thousands of Northern California youth and families who are in crisis and in our care. Together, we can break negative cycles, facilitate hope and provide critical services to help youth and families overcome major barriers such as:

POVERTY
- 1 in 6 children (nearly 12 million youth under 18) in America live in poverty and face food insecurity. 73% are children of color.
- The proportion of federal dollars invested in children has fallen to its lowest level in a decade.

INCOME INEQUALITY
- In 2017, the median family income of white households with children ($88,200) was more than double that of Black ($40,100) and Hispanic households with children ($46,400).

AFFORDABLE HOUSING / HOMELESSNESS
- Nearly 6 million children live in low-income families that spend more than half their income on rent and get no rental assistance from the government. Only 1 in 4 eligible households receive federal housing aid.
- Children comprised 1 in 5 of nearly 553,000 homeless people living in shelters, transitional housing and on the streets on a single night in Jan. 2018.
- In 2019, a person working full-time, year-round at minimum wage could not afford the monthly Fair Market Rent for a two-bedroom rental unit in ANY STATE or the District of Columbia.

EDUCATION
- Trapped in inequitable schools, low-income, Black and Hispanic students suffer academically. More than 74% of low-income, 72% of Hispanic and 79% of Black fourth and eighth grade public school students were not proficient in reading or math in 2019.

FOOD INSECURITY
- More than 1 in 6 children—12.5 million—lived in food-insecure households in 2017. The percent of Black and Hispanic households with food-insecure children was nearly two times that of white households.

HEALTHCARE
- 2017 and 2018 marked the first increases in the number of uninsured children in the U.S. in a decade. An estimated 4.3 million children under 19 were uninsured in 2018—425,000 more than the previous year.

Children are more likely to reenter care after reunification when the following factors are present:

- Being African-American
- Having physical/behavioral problems (child)
- A parent with mental health problems
- Low education or substance use issues
- Living in poverty

The overarching goal for all foster youth is to ensure they have a safe, stable and permanent place to call home.

Preferred Exit Goals for Foster Youth

REUNIFICATION
The goal for a majority of foster youth is successful reunification with their family once they can provide a safe and stable environment and the risk of reentry is low for the foster youth.

KINSHIP CARE
Legally appointing family or non-family as guardians who agree to nurture and provide for a foster youth may be a positive option when reunification is not possible.

ADOPTION
A permanent, loving home may be provided for a youth via adoption from foster care (fost-adopt).

SUCCESSFUL TRANSITION TO INDEPENDENCE
As Transition Aged Youth (TAY) approach adulthood (18yo), it is critical they have access to resources that will ensure they can become independent members of their community including: behavioral health services, education/job assistance, life skills, access to stable housing and long-term connections.

These are our own children, living in our towns, on our streets, attending our schools. Yet there are no “waiting lines” of families eager and willing to adopt these kids – our kids – from foster care. This failure to find permanent families for the more than 100,000 children in foster care eligible for adoption has dire yet preventable consequences.

Approximately 25,000 youth age out (or are “emancipated”) each year. The resulting social and economic costs, primarily for the states that are charged with their welfare, are huge.

Wayne Winston Sharp, PH.D
Immediate Past Chair,
National Council for Adoption

Children, teens and siblings in foster care who are eligible for adoption may find their forever home with
- Resource parents who choose to adopt them
- Individuals or couples seeking to adopt from foster care

AFS home approvers and caseworkers work in tandem to ensure youth are placed with compatible resource parents so they have the best chance of a successful placement. This was the case with Veronica*.

Veronica came to AFS after ten failed placements over three years. The thirteen-year-old had been displaced by the Sonoma County fires and was forced to live in a homeless shelter. Veronica’s mother suffered from depression and alcoholism which ultimately led to Veronica’s placement in foster care.

The pain and abandonment Veronica felt led to her acting out. She never stayed anywhere for more than a few months. When Veronica was referred to AFS, staff had a couple in mind that had the heart and training to care for a teen who had been traumatized, Mr. and Mrs. Garcia*.

While there were ups and downs, the Garcia's were dedicated to Veronica’s wellbeing and showed her compassion, respect and consistency. Veronica recommitted to her education, is engaged in services to care for her behavioral health issues and is on the path to being adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Garcia who she now calls Mom and Dad.

MENTAL HEALTH

Most AFS clients come from environments of poverty, food insecurity, trauma, racism, substance abuse, mental health issues, and sexual and commercial exploitation. All are at high risk of experiencing significant mental health issues.

AFS clinicians provide a variety of therapeutic services to help foster children, teens and families heal by treating issues including:

Complex or ongoing trauma due to
- Abuse / neglect of self or loved one
- Death of a parent, sibling or personal connection
- Chronic illness or absence of a parent or loved one
- Significant impairment of parenting skills typically caused by mental illness, substance abuse or cognitive impairment
- Exposure to violence in the home and neighborhood
- Homelessness, poverty and food insecurity

Ongoing and Disruptive Transitions
- Initial removal from home and family
- Separation from siblings
- Feelings surrounding unpredictable visitations with family
- Moving to long-term foster care because parental rights were terminated

Negative Family Relationship Cycles
- Learning how to manage feelings, communicate effectively and learning how to respect and cooperate with others.

AFS clinicians use several mental health treatment and intervention models including:

Trauma Focused Cognitive Behavioral Therapy specifically designed to help individuals suffering from PTSD or other significant traumas

Motivational Interviewing helps individuals fight antipathy and instigate self-directed behavioral changes

Positive Parenting Program (Triple P) helps both biological and foster parents understand mental health needs in youth and provide thoughtful, relevant support.

Trauma Informed Parenting Parenting in OZ) a proprietary and unique training that uses the colorful imagery of the Wizard of Oz to help visualize the ever-present fears that are the core of childhood traumas.

Community & Home Based mental health services allow AFS clinicians to stabilize and strengthen families in their homes and communities. This makes the interventions and teachable moments much more applicable and impactful.

During FY 19-20 AFS provided
- Outpatient mental health services to an average of 50 foster children and teens every day
- Outpatient mental health services to 313 different foster children and teens

Approximately 67% of AFS mental health clients made noted progress on treatment goals.
The report, Assessing the Effects of Foster Care: Mental Health Outcomes from the Casey National Alumni Study, found significant disparities in mental health when they compared former foster youth to adults from the general population, matched for age, gender, and race/ethnicity and found the following:

COVID-19 has created many obstacles for AFS staff including developing a model that included a transparent and equitable process for visitation to occur among families to help them achieve reunification. Hours of brainstorming between staff and families resulted in the safe, compassionate, and engaging, Enhanced Visitation Model that includes:

- Health Assessment Tool: Wellness Questionnaire
- Visitation Service Plan
- Enhanced Visitation Venues
- Virtual Visitation
- Performance Quality Improvement

The AFS Enhanced Visitation Model is one of four National finalists for the Council on Accreditation’s, “Innovative Practices Award.”

One of the strongest predictors of a successful reunification between a biological parent and their child is the frequency of visitation sessions.
Kids in foster care typically have experienced serious abuse, neglect and trauma, which affect both brain development and their ability to have relationships with their new family. And that often means different parenting techniques are needed.

For example, for children who were abandoned by their biological parents, a timeout can be traumatic, because they fear they’re being abandoned again. Adoptive and foster parents need ongoing training to help them navigate the intricacies of parenting traumatized children, along with the help of peer support groups and mental health services to deal with the trauma.

Mary Boo,
Executive Director
North American Council on Adoptable Children

In order to provide foster youth and families with the care and services necessary to help them heal and thrive, it’s necessary for resource parents and professionals to receive ongoing training and education.

AFS provides the following foster care training services to the general public (in English and Spanish):
- County Funded Trainings in Alameda, Contra Costa and Solano Counties
- Parenting for Permanency College (PPC) in San Francisco County

Examples of trainings:
- Understanding Self-harm & Suicidal Behaviors with System Involved Youth
- How to Effectively Work with Commercial Sexually Exploited Children
- Grief and Loss in the Traumatized Child
- Helping Struggling Teen Boys Become Confident Young Men

COVID-19 forced trainings to be delivered remotely. When the pandemic struck AFS staff quickly updated curricula, adapted to new technology platforms and developed creative ways to maintain strong connections with the AFS community including:
- Mailing training kits to participants
- Purchasing laptops and tablets to support Resource Family Training
- In lieu of the cancelled May Resource Family Appreciation Event, AFS gave every San Francisco County Resource Family who had a placement in FY ’19-’20 a $50 Target gift card
- Sending a mass PPE care package that included: (1) face shield, (50) disposable masks, (4) KN-95 masks, (6) KID masks, (3) mini-sanitizers, (10) foot coverings and (1) Red Cross First Aid Kit Plus

The Parenting for Permanency College (PPC) is a training contract with San Francisco Human Services Agency, Children and Family Services to provide prospective San Francisco County (not AFS) approved resource parents support and resources as they navigate the Child Welfare system in caring for children.

Recruitment Services
- Training support: Pre-Service Training
- Mentor Program

Retention Services
- Advanced Trainings to meet the required 8 hours of ongoing training
- Placement Trainings
- KID’s Newsletter
- Coordinate 2 major events a year
  - May: Resource Parent Appreciation Event
  - December: Holiday Event for Resource Parents and Youth

Support Services
- Support with Resource Parent Meetings
- Collaborate with other CBO’s
- Facilitate marketing, registration and scheduling of training and events empowerment: the process of becoming stronger and more confident, especially in controlling and claiming one’s rights
Maria’s Story

Thank you for your willingness to share your story.
You’re welcome. I hope it raises awareness and inspires others who have experienced trauma and abuse.

What were the circumstances that brought you to the United States?
I was 16 and living in Central America with my parents and younger sister. My mother, sister and I worked hard labor to support our daily needs. Unfortunately, my father was abusive to all of us. Through it all, my mom, sister and I still made each other smile. I started to challenge my father to show he was losing control over our lives. One day, he told me he found me a job as a nanny in the United States. I was desperate to help my mom and sister and was willing to move miles away to help us have a better life. So, I took the job.

What happened when you arrived in the U.S.?
A couple picked me up in Oklahoma. It turned out there was no nanny job. They said I would live the life of a queen and all I had to do was please my new owner. I realized I was in great danger, called my father and begged him to save me. He said he didn’t mean to hurt me and never imagined the magnitude of sending me with strangers. So, he arranged for me to live with his “friend” in San Francisco. When I got to San Francisco, the man welcomed me as his new “wife.” I learned from my mother that my father received money from this “friend” for me. In short, my Dad sold me to a trafficker.

How did that make you feel?
My heart hurts knowing my Dad sold me as a sex object and chose money over his daughter. It’s horrible knowing the person who was supposed to protect me instead tried to destroy me.

How were you able to escape?
I felt scared and alone, but knew I could get myself out of the situation, dead or alive. My mother found a cousin I could stay with and I ran away to her house. For a few weeks, things were ok. Unfortunately, the man found me and threatened my cousin. I suspect my father forced my mother to tell him where I was. My cousin looked for help and ended up turning me in to San Francisco County. I couldn’t understand why and I hated her for it. Here I had gone through hell and was going to get shipped home where I was sure my Dad would kill me. But, life gave me a second chance. I entered foster care and an AFS resource family took me under their roof.

What was your experience like with the new family and AFS?
I was scared the traffickers and my father would find me and take revenge. I was always looking over my shoulder. Once I was sure I was safe, my foster parents, AFS therapist and social worker helped me mentally, physically, emotionally and financially. AFS brought me back to life and gave me hope. My foster parents treated my like their own child and taught me how to trust again.

What does your life look like now?
I graduated from high school and community college with an Associates Degree in Business Administration. I’m currently earning a BA in Business. Had it not been for financial support and scholarships, it would have been impossible for me to continue my education. I’m forever thankful for the support. I can finally say I’ve found my inner peace and accept the past. When I find myself worrying, I repeat my favorite quote,

“God grant me with serenity to accept the things I cannot change, the courage to change the things I can, and the wisdom to know the difference” -Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr

AFS Content Manager, Matt Kaplan, interviewed “Maria,” a former AFS client. We thank her for the courage to share her story of resilience and hope. Alias used to protect client identity.
We Will Have Justice

Like so many of us, the AFS Community is grief-stricken and dismayed about the killings of George Floyd, Ahmaud Arbery, Breonna Taylor and too many others. Unfortunately, these untimely deaths are far too common. We honor the grief and dismay that anyone in our community may be feeling.

We are one community. Any pain is all of our pain.

As a foster family agency, we are no strangers to the issues that communities of color face here in Northern California and across the nation. We are proud and honored to stand alongside our Black foster youth, families, communities and staff members and all who have been oppressed and treated unjustly. We must do the work to pay the debt we owe to them, to ourselves, and especially to the children. At AFS we say, “It’s All About the Kids!” We strive so the world our children inherit from us is a more just world.

The time has come for us to eradicate the chasm between our noble but unrealized founding ideals - liberty, justice, and equality for all - and the realities that have fallen so woefully short. We have some work to do.

Beyond ourselves personally, we as a society must commit to re-examine all of our failing institutions – health care, economy, law enforcement, housing, education, and so many others – and demand they become more just. Future generation will look back at this time and they will judge us, we must not fail them.

Justice. Justice. We will have Justice.

From CEO, Jay Berlin’s letter to AFS staff
Summer 2020
For more than four decades, AFS has practiced acceptance and dignified treatment of LGBTQ+ parents, staff and foster youth through its Foster Care, Mental Health, Adoption and Training services. AFS staff understand and have been trained in the unique needs of the LGBTQ+ children, teens and young adults in our care.

Experienced AFS trainers also facilitate specialized trainings for professionals and caregivers on how to support LGBTQ+ foster youth. Trainers discuss aspects of sexual orientation, gender identity expression (SOGIE) and lesbian, gay, bisexual, trans-gender, queer and questioning (LGBTQ+), as related to resource families caring for self-identified youth. The main objectives for participants in LGBTQ+ training courses include:

- Achieving basic competency with the community, including an understanding of terminology and experiences relating to sexual orientation, gender identity and expression.
- Explore common experiences of LGBTQ foster youth.
- Identifying similarities of LGBTQ+ foster youth and other youth in care.
- Learning the important role foster parents play when they open their homes and hearts to LGTBQ+ youth in foster care.
- Understand the protections necessary for youth in the LGBTQ+ community.

Source, “Fostering Inequity: How COVID-19 Amplifies Dangers for LGBTQ+ Youth in Care”

- 30% of LGBTQ+ youth have reported physical violence at the hands of a family member after coming out.
- 40% of homeless youth identify as LGBTQ+.
- 19.6% of LGBTQ+ youth were moved from their first placement at the request of their caregiver or foster family compared with 8.6% of heterosexual youth.
- 26% of LGBTQ+ youth are forced from their homes due to conflict with their families over their sexual orientation or gender.
AFS employs approximately 200 social workers, clinicians, support counselors, administrative staff and managers. All services are offered in English and Spanish. Approximately 25% of staff are English-Spanish bilingual. AFS uses a support model emphasizing:

- Client driven-individualized treatment planning
- 24/7 support and response
- Home & Community Based care
- Cultural humility and appreciation of diversity

community: a unified body of individuals
Oftentimes when one thinks of foster care, they imagine foster “kids.” However, in the United States, 115,395 out of 423,997 youth in foster care in 2019 were 13-20 years old. Teens and young adults in foster care require different types of individualized care. At Alternative Family Services (AFS), caseworkers and resource parents receive specialized training in how to support older youth. In California, Assembly Bill 12 extends foster care services and support to young adults between 18-21 years old which allowed Dwayne* to become an AFS client when he was nineteen.

Dwayne is on the autism spectrum and has rigid thinking. Growing up, he experienced homelessness, neglect and likely some form of abuse. One of Dwayne’s residual traumas was associated with getting on a bus. An important part of working with older youth in foster care is preparing them for independence. Part of being independent is the ability to use transportation to school, work, medical appointments, the store, etc. At first, when Dwayne’s caseworker, Eliza, discussed with him the idea of riding the bus, it triggered anxiety and a negative emotional reaction. Eliza knew riding a bus was a critical for Dwayne to become more self-reliant so she strategized with fellow clinicians and formed a comprehensive treatment plan.

For almost one year, Dwayne participated in regular therapy and learned Independent Living Skills (ILS). One day during one of his sessions, Dwayne agreed to ride the bus. For weeks prior to his bus ride, Eliza roll-played and helped Dwayne visualize the entire bus riding experience from start to finish. When the visualization triggered a negative reaction, Dwayne practiced using the anxiety reduction techniques and positive self-talk he had learned.

The day finally arrived for the bus ride, and Dwayne was ready but nervous. Eliza took a “Community Based Therapy” approach and met Dwayne at the bus stop. She supported him through difficult memories about his past. The two boarded the bus and successfully reached their destination, Jamba Juice. Both were elated Dwayne achieved such a milestone on his journey towards greater independence.

Weeks later, and several joint bus trips with Eliza, Dwayne was able to ride the bus on his own. Eventually, he became a master at taking public transit, whether it was Uber or the bus. By age 21, after two years of working with Eliza, he had enough mental and emotional tools to officially age out of foster care. Overcoming his fear of public transportation gave Dwayne enough courage and freedom to interview and ultimately find a job interview.

Because of the caring and committed AFS network of staff, resource parents, community / business partners and donors, Dwayne was able to secure housing on his own and live life independently. Dwayne periodically checks in with Eliza who was happy to report Dwayne continues to have stable employment and housing.

While portions of “Direct Client Services” are funded through county contracts (i.e. caseworker salaries) the bus passes and Jamba Juice in Dwayne’s Story were paid for by AFS from funds made by generous donors.

SROIs are projected savings to society as a result of services provided. Given the assumed impacts due to these services (e.g., improved academic outcomes, reduced emergency room visits) and given empirical evidence of the short term financial costs associated with these Impacts, the SROI tells us for every $1 spent on program delivery, how many dollars are potentially saved by society.\(^\text{12}\)

At any point in time, AFS has approximately 300 pre-k through college age youth in its foster care, mental health, adoption and Transition Age Youth (TAY) programs.

The annual AFS Foster Learning campaign raised $10,327 in critical funds that were used towards the educational needs of foster youth and TAY.

The AFS Development Department is regularly seeking grants and donations that raise funds for foster youth education.

Staff in the TAY program at AFS are highly committed to helping clients achieve the education and job training necessary for them to attain their life goals and become independent.

Examples of how donations and grant funds may be used:

$5000
- 1 month of housing assistance for 5 transition age youth

$500
- 2 laptops for foster youth to learn remotely

$250
- 3 car seats to transport our youngest foster youth

$125
- 2 PPE kits for resource parents to safely take in foster youth

$50
- 1 hair lice treatment for a newly placed foster youth

The AFS Community believes in providing hopeful opportunities to the many foster children and teens whose lives have been impacted by significant struggles. Having access to a bike, music lessons, basketball hoop, camp or art class can provide a physical, social and therapeutic outlet for foster youth and are an important part of their journey towards healing and thriving.

Together, individual donors, corporate partners, foundations and community partners contributed $333,111 of the $1.03M spent on critical needs and services for foster kids, transition age youth and families that included items such as:

EDUCATIONAL SUPPORT
- laptops, tablets, course fees, supplies, tutoring, backpacks

ENRICHMENT CLASSES & CAMPS
- sports, arts, dance, science, cosmetology training, summer camp

ESSENTIALS
- new clothes, shoes, bedding & toiletries for new placements

HOUSING & TRANSPORTATION for TRANSITION AGE YOUTH
- rent support, grocery & gas gift cards, utilities, home goods

SAFETY
- PPE and car seats to transport and place foster youth in safe and stable homes

SUPPLIES
- bikes, balls, games, stuffed animals, art supplies

THERAPEUTICS
- art therapy tools, dolls, puppets, sand trays, 1-1 caseworker outings

AFS welcomes, Simone West, Director of Resource Development to the Administrative Team. Simone brings with her a passion and commitment to securing funds and resources for foster youth and families. The Development Department is responsible for strategic growth, program enhancement and agency sustainability through the management of constituents, special events, board support and grant procurement.
AFS Annual Giving Campaigns
Generous individuals, corporations, foundations and community organizations raised $72,468 through our three annual campaigns:

Foster Learning (July-August)
$10,327 helped AFS provide laptops and tablets for every school aged foster youth to help narrow the education gap

Foster Hope (May)
$33,851 raised that goes toward enrichment opportunities for foster youth to provide a therapeutic outlet, learn social/emotional/behavioral skills and raise self-confidence

Foster Joy (November-December)
$28,290 raised and over 4,000 toys distributed to foster youth and their bio-siblings to brighten their spirits during the holiday season

Notes
- AFS has rebranded the Wish Upon a Wreath, Foster Care Awareness Month and Wish Upon a Backpack to Foster Joy, Foster Hope and Foster Learning
- Bio-siblings are the biological children of resource parents who are fostering a child or teen.

At AFS, we are seeing more kids, teens and transition age youth experiencing homelessness. More kids are entering care malnourished and with cases of head lice. Because of the pandemic, older foster youth have lost their jobs, stable living environments and many have had to forego their education. For some clients, access to basic human needs like housing, clothing, warmth, nutritious meals, rest, physical and mental healthcare and education have barely been met when they enter care.

On behalf of AFS staff and families, we thank all the donors, sponsors and grantees whose support has provided lifelines for the most vulnerable youth and families in our society.
“1st United Credit Union feels it’s important to contribute to the communities we’re in. We have been serving East Bay residents since 1932 and feel the community is stronger if everyone who can takes action and assists those in need. We connected with AFS at one of their special events in 2012. Once we learned what AFS did for the community, we found them to be a perfect philanthropic partner.

“1st United’s staff hosts company events to fill backpacks with school supplies, build bikes and donate toys to foster youth cared for by AFS. We also donate food, funds and people power for AFS events. Staff enjoy working with the AFS team, especially the kids. From a personal and corporate perspective, nothing feels better than helping those in need, particularly youth. 1st United’s volunteer and philanthropic efforts have also provided a benefit to recruiting new staff, as good people are drawn to an organization that supports good causes.”

Adam Reiner, Board Chair
Resource Development Committee

Adam currently serves as President and CEO of Sakura of America, an arts, crafts and writing instrument manufacturer, headquartered in Hayward, CA. Prior to Sakura, Adam spent twenty years at the Clorox Company in various leadership roles. Adam joined the AFS Board in 2019.

“I’m excited and energized to serve as the AFS Resource Development Chair. We know that foster youth face enormous challenges in the best of times and resource development plays a crucial role in supporting them. As we look forward, our priorities will focus on creatively engaging and building awareness with community partners and donors in our mission and work.

“Additionally, we have a goal of embedding and nurturing a Culture of Philanthropy throughout AFS, which starts by cultivating the understanding around how fundraising and community engagement is core to our success in fulfilling the AFS mission.”
DON RATH, CPA
AFS Board President

Don is a retired finance executive with over 35 years of experience in professional services and publicly traded companies. He is a writer, consultant, and a part-time faculty member of Golden Gate University in San Francisco.

“I am honored to serve as the AFS Board President. After five years of serving on the Board, I have been humbled by the tremendous dedication of our families, staff and volunteers in supporting the needs of our most vulnerable children.

What drew me to AFS and keeps me engaged is its approach that addresses both the present and future needs of the children entrusted to us and how staff engages with the communities we serve in an empathetic and culturally competent way. You feel a sense of mission in every interaction you experience as part of the organization. I am so grateful for the support of our donors for helping AFS, and our children and families, succeed.”

The AFS Board in collaboration with the Resource Development department is working to strengthen the Board’s, “Culture of Philanthropy.” As part of this process, each board member created a statement reflecting why they’re on the Board. Below are four of their excerpts.

Why I’m On the Board

“As a child of immigrants from China, who was born and raised in Oakland, I’ve seen firsthand the inequities in communities no more than fifteen miles apart. I’ve always had a personal passion to support the underrepresented, especially people of color and children. Being a part of the AFS Community allows me to be an ambassador for the AFS mission, by protecting and advocating for the most vulnerable youth,” Inverleith Fruci.

“I’m an AFS Board member because the plight of our most vulnerable and neglected children breaks my heart. I want to be an active fighter in giving them an honest chance. AFS has been a community cornerstone for more than forty years, it has been proven that they’ll be the good guys when advocating and caring for the most vulnerable youth,” Nathan Lipkin.

“I want to create a more equitable world and I think this can start with investing in children. Growing up in India, it was hard not to be aware of the difference in privilege. Providing underprivileged kids with the opportunities that I simply took for granted growing up is really at the core of why I serve on the AFS BOD,” Rohan Bafna.

“I believe deeply that knowing you can change the trajectory of a child’s life is critical to making a real difference in the world. I believe that early impacts can have significant and lasting change. I’m an immigrant from Syria who was raised by a single mom who was an emergency room nurse in Oakland for more than thirty years. I’m the benefactor of people in my life, especially in my youth, that took particular interest in me that helped create a point of inflection and influence that changed the trajectory of my life. This support changed my life’s outlook and very much contributed to the person I am today. I believe in paying it forward with wealth and/or wisdom and the AFS Family shares these common views about being able to make a meaningful difference in a child or teenager’s life,” Karim Toubba

In FY ‘19-’20 AFS had 15 Board Members

- 67% men
- 33% women

100% of the board participated in raising $112,918
The AFS Board of Directors takes the ultimate ethical and legal responsibility to ensure that the agency does the best work possible in pursuit of its goals. It provides mission-based leadership and strategic governance while leaving day to day operations to the CEO and staff.

Every member of the board signs a Letter of Agreement outlining 18 specific governance responsibilities that include oversight of the agency’s programs and budget, annual performance evaluation of the CEO, and interpreting the agency’s work and values to the community. All board members agree to serve on at least two board committees. All board members consider AFS a philanthropic priority and make annual gifts to meet their determined “Give-Get” financial contribution.

The Board of Directors is highly committed to supporting the agency’s efforts around diversity, equity and inclusion. The board aims to reflect the communities AFS serves.

AFS Transition Age Youth (TAY) Programs

The American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry defines Transition Age Youth (TAY) as young people between the ages of sixteen and twenty-four who are in transition from state custody or foster care environments and are at-risk.

The TAY programs at AFS offer a broad range of services to a diverse population. Some clients have significant mental health issues due to the trauma they have experienced often including histories of neglect and abuse. Services are culturally appropriate, highly individualized, flexible and creatively responsive. AFS helps young people cope with immediate practical issues like employment, education, and financial literacy as well as deeper, emotional life issues like drug use, mental health issues, homelessness and sexual exploitation.

AFS has three TAY programs

Patty Cala, TAY Program Director, who joined AFS in 1993 loves working with teens. The TAY Team brings vitality, innovation, creativity and fun to their therapeutic approach with TAY clients which is what makes AFS TAY services unique and successful.

Independent Living Skills Program (ILSP)

ILSP teaches young adults between 16-21 years-old the necessary skills to make the difficult transition to adulthood. AFS has managed the Marin County Independent Living Skills Program (ILSP) serving TAY clients since 1988. Services end on client’s 21st birthday.

Transitional Housing Program Plus (THP+)

THP+ is a transitional housing program for young adults who exited foster care on or after their 18th birthday and are not yet 24 years of age (25 in counties that have opted to extend services per SB 1252).

Engagement is the cornerstone of this housing and employment program as these young adults navigate the many obstacles during their transition from foster care to their own apartments. Supporting participants to create and develop healthy relationships with employers, landlords, therapists, relatives, and friends is central to this transition. In 2007, AFS opened Marin’s first THP+ for TAY.

Transitional Housing Placement for Non-Minor Dependents (THP-NMD)

Beginning in 2021, AFS will provide housing and comprehensive support services to eligible 18-21 year-olds who are participating in extended foster care, which was established by Assembly Bill 12, the California Fostering Connections to Success Act.
Dear AFS,

Hi, my name is Will* and I used to be in the Marin THP+ program at AFS. I came into THP+ when I was 20 years old. I had never had a job or my own place and I really didn’t know how to make it on my own. I was getting in trouble with the law and getting arrested. When I first came to THP+, I was partying a lot. I got my first job at Rite Aid and it was really hard to get motivated to go to work even for just a few hours a week. I ended up getting evicted and kicked out of THP+. I got arrested and had to go live in Santa Rosa where it was not a good situation.

AFS staff, Celeste* and Annie* never gave up on me. They gave me another chance to stop partying and get serious. It took me a few months but I decided to follow the rules and went back to THP+. The staff helped me get a job at Trader Joes, where I’ve been working for two years now. I have recently been promoted to supervisor. I had never thought of myself of one day being a boss. Sophie and Patty were there for me every time I made a mistake and every time I needed someone. They helped me learn how to be a good neighbor, good employee and good friend. When my Mom died, they were there for me. When I was living in my THP+ apartment I became friends with my neighbors across the hall. They became a kind of family for me. I brought them to the THP+ boat party and they said they hadn’t realized how special they had become to me. Patty and Sophie helped me make sure to keep the relationship with them. My neighbors were there for me during some rough times and they became like a family to me. Without Sophie, Patty and my neighbors, I truly don’t know if I would be alive today. I would probably be in jail, and would not have the good job, the good people in my life and a place in Marin that I call home.

Thank you,

Will

LIFELOG CONNECTIONS PROJECT (LCP)

LCP Goals & Objectives

- Develop and manage at least one lifelong connection for participating TAY
- Increase TAY stability and independence in their communities
- Reduce incidents of formal crisis intervention by having lifelong connections provide mentorship and support during the TAY’s journey to independence
- Teach positive adult relationship skills

Examples of LCP monthly and quarterly events:

Identify a Lifelong Connection

- Theme: Identifying and maintaining relationships and the value of thanking someone without needing anything in return.
- Task: TAY sends a Thank You Note to a lifelong connection thanking them for being in their life.

Maintaining Lifelong Connections

Theme: Easy ways to maintain communication with Lifelong Connections.
Task: Text “Hello!” This exercise is simply intended to show how easy and important it can be to “stay in touch.”

Engaging Participants

Bowling with Friends: A fun event that brings TAY and lifelong connections together to introduce the project and build relationships for on-going participation.

Celebrating Lifelong Connections

Connections on the Bay: A cruise on the Bay celebrating and honoring the relationship between TAY and their lifelong connections. The event is preceded with a TAY meeting that discusses what is and is not appropriate in social contexts and feelings about their connection being associated with them in public.

Due to traumatic life events, often accompanied with many physical moves from place to place, many young adults exiting foster care are significantly isolated and lack personal support networks. The AFS Lifelong Connections Project teaches Transition Age Youth (TAY) the skills necessary to identify, cultivate, and sustain lifelong relationships that are essential in developing a healthy and stable life. Individuals and families willing to stay involved in the lives of TAY on an ongoing basis are their “Lifelong Connection.” These connections have become critical to TAY’s support system as they address social, emotional, health, employment, school, and housing issues.

An average of 90% of eligible TAY participate in LCP

When my Mom died, they were there for me. When I was living in my THP+ apartment I became friends with my neighbors across the hall. They became a kind of family for me. I brought them to the THP+ boat party and they said they hadn’t realized how special they had become to me. Patty and Sophie helped me make sure to keep the relationship with them. My neighbors were there for me during some rough times and they became like a family to me. Without Sophie, Patty and my neighbors, I truly don’t know if I would be alive today. I would probably be in jail, and would not have the good job, the good people in my life and a place in Marin that I call home.

Thank you,

Will

The Independent Living Skills Program (ILSP) helps youth between the ages of 16-21 learn the necessary skills to make a successful transition to independent living. Individualized case management and real-world exposure are central to the ILSP experience. Skills assessment, collaborative input and regular meetings with the youth allows ILSP caseworkers to help clients achieve educational, employment and independent living goals. ILSP caseworkers help foster youth with the following:

Life Skills
- Caseworkers help each youth acquire proper identification (Social Security card, driver's license, birth certificate).
- Financial education and planning are taught to clients by caseworkers or special workshops.
- Teaching clients about health education, nutrition and overall wellness, including access to health insurance.

Educational Assistance
- Identify and secure resources for the client including financial aid for college or vocational education.

Career Assistance
- Career assessment helps clients create their best employment plan, prepare a resume, search for jobs learn interviewing skills.

Housing & Transportation Assistance
- Assist youth in obtaining affordable housing & reliable transportation.
- Clients learn to manage responsibilities such as paying rent, utilities, auto maintenance and keeping insurance up to date.
- Communicating effectively with peers, colleagues, supervisors and instructors.
The Transition Housing Program Plus (THP+) is a structured program for former foster youth between the ages of 18-24 who have aged out of the foster care system and who lack families or support systems. Caseworkers work with the client to create an individual service plan that allows youth to gain increasing independence from formal assistance as their earning power and life skills grow.

The THP+ program provides:
- 1-1 counseling
- AFS leased apartments which it rents to youth at sub-market rates
- Educational and job support
- Training in essential life skills for successful independent living
- Assistance in securing health care and community based resources
